

Rob Anderson

Advisor
Denver

Professional Experience

As an advisor at Cresa, Rob works with the Denver brokerage team to represent occupiers across the front range. His unique background in real estate, professional fundraising, and national politics makes Rob a master in building long-term beneficial relationships with his clients. He is adept at providing proactive strategic advice in all aspects of a company's real estate, from office leases to industrial purchases and everything in between. His responsibilities include business development, market research, strategic planning, site selection, financial analysis and lease negotiation.
