

Andrew McShea

Senior Research / Financial Analyst
San Francisco Bay Area

Professional Experience

As a Research/Financial Analyst, Andrew focuses on driving analytics for market research purposes as well as delivering acute financial analysis for broker clients. Andrew works closely with other analysts and marketing professionals to provide quantitative analysis that delivers high-impact market reports and materials to promote business initiatives. Prior to joining Cresa in 2020, Andrew worked as a Research Analyst with Transwestern in their San Francisco office focusing on the Office, Life Science, and Multifamily asset classes. Through his work with previous employers, he helped oversee the production and management of quarterly reports, client facing deliverables, and research papers on various market insights and trends. Throughout college, he held multiple internships with various firms including CBRE as a Brokerage Support Summer Intern.

Education

Andrew graduated from the University of South Carolina with degrees in both Real Estate and Finance and a Spanish language minor. Outside of university, Andrew has become ARGUS Certified with participation in the CCIM Institute.

Interests

Growing up on the East Coast in Annapolis, Maryland, Andrew has an affinity for sailing. He taught as a sailing instructor for multiple summers during high school and continues to sail in the New England area. On the weekends, he enjoys going snowboarding, camping, and hiking in the surrounding Bay Area.
