CELEBRATE CANADA'S BEST WORKPLACES 2019

Please join me in congratulating each of this year's Best Workplaces

IT'S ALL ABOUT TRUST.
For over 30 years, we've studied and celebrated the world's best workplaces. These organizations demonstrate that focused and systematic investment in culture development pays significant and sustained dividends for all organizational stakeholders. By sharing our ongoing insights into current and future trends in best workplaces, we strive to create more positive experiences for employees and management alike, and in doing so, advance our mission of building a better world by helping organizations become Great Places to Work FOR

ALL. Great Place to Work partners with leading organizations from around the world to research, identify and build high-trust, high-performance workplace cultures. Our results show that building great workplaces for all is better for people, better for business and better for the world.

Congratulations,

José Tolóvi Neto
Managing Partner for Great Place to Work Institute Canada

ABOUT GREAT PLACE TO WORK

Great Place to Work is a global people analytics and consulting firm that specializes in workplace trust. We operate in over 60 countries around the world and partner with organizations of all sizes and industries to build stronger cultures and achieve better business results.

HOW TO GET RECOGNIZED

To be eligible for the list of Best Workplaces in Canada, organizations must be "Great Place to Work Certified" in the past year. We rank the best by taking 2/3 of the score from the Trust Index Employee Survey and 1/3 of the score from the Culture Questionnaire.

BY THE NUMBERS

This 2019 List assessed over 400 organizations, with employee feedback representing over 300,000 Canada based employees.

WHAT DIFFERENTIATES THE BEST?

BY ALISON GRENIER
Head of Culture and Research, Great Place to Work

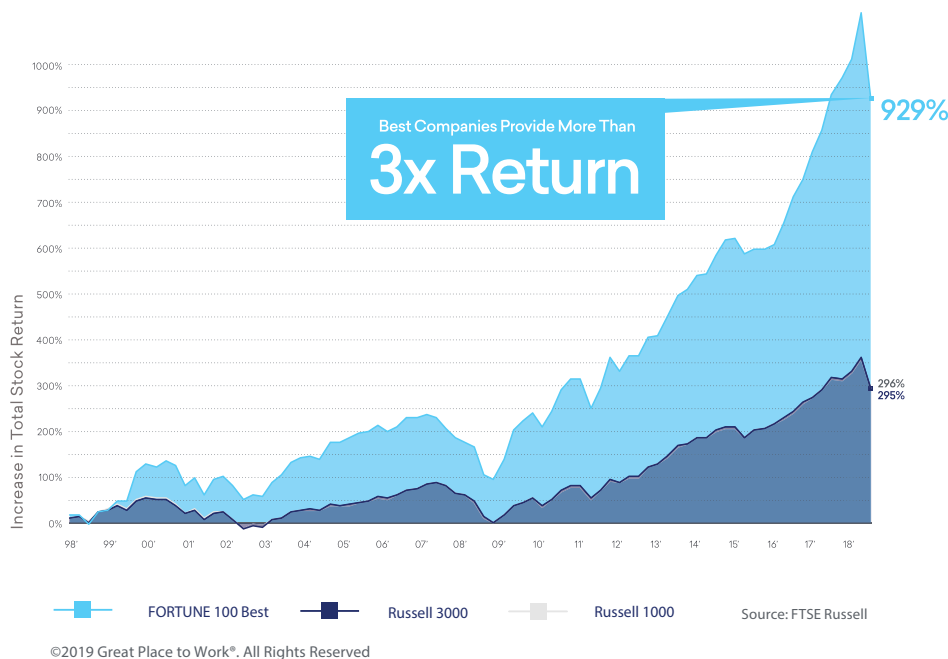

Business rules are changing. Societal and technological advancements are creating new opportunities and challenges for organizations. Many traditional jobs don't exist anymore and new roles are being created daily. People of diverse backgrounds are speaking up and being heard. All of these changes mean companies must clear a higher bar to win the war for talent.

FOUNDATION OF TRUST

This year's list of Best Workplaces in Canada represents great diversity in terms of sector, industry, size and location. Each has pioneered a unique path to success. But there is one thing they all have in common – TRUST.

Over two decades of research confirms that workplace trust is the foundation for quality jobs and performance excellence. Employees who trust their managers give their best work freely, and that extra effort goes directly to the company's bottom line. Managers who trust their employees allow innovative ideas to bubble up from all levels of the company. Employees who trust each other report a sense of camaraderie and even the feeling of being part of a family. Together, people working in high trust environments deliver far more value than the sum of their individual efforts. Building workplace trust is the best investment any organization can make.

2019 stock performance of FORTUNE 100 Best

TRUST FUELS GROWTH

For the past 20 years, the Best Workplaces have consistently experienced better stock market returns, lower turnover (about half of industry average), better customer service, higher levels of innovation and increased productivity. The chart above illustrates the results of a study by Russell Investment Group that tracked, over the course of two decades, the comparative annualized stock returns of companies recognized by Great Place to Work as "high-trust" cultures. These companies performed more than three times better than the general market.

INCLUSION ACCELERATES GROWTH

We are entering a new frontier in business: one that is about improving business results by developing every ounce of human potential. While we know that high-trust organizations grow faster than their peers, our newest research shows that when high-trust organizations are also inclusive, their growth is accelerated.

We call a truly inclusive workplace a Great Place to Work FOR ALL. The idea is a kind of holistic inclusivity where daily human interactions at work recognize, welcome and expect great things from every employee, no matter who they are, what they look like, where they come from or what they do in the organization. In doing so, these organizations cultivate the human potential of all their people and outperform their competitors.

Our newest research tracks the median, year-over-year revenue growth of organizations that have built an *Innovation By All*¹ culture by involving more employees in the innovation process. These organizations generate more high-quality ideas, realize greater speed in implementation and achieve greater agility – resulting in 5.5 times the revenue growth of peers with a less inclusive approach to innovation.

BUILDING GREAT PLACES TO WORK FOR ALL

Great Place to Work's mission is to build a better world by helping organizations become Great Places to Work FOR ALL. Our research clearly shows that Great Places to Work FOR ALL are better for business. Their high-trust and inclusive cultures fuel growth and cultivate the human potential of all employees. Great Places to Work FOR ALL are also better for people, enabling everyone involved to achieve more than they thought was possible and enjoy healthier, more fulfilling lives.

EMPOWERING WOMEN FOR INNOVATION AND BUSINESS SUCCESS

BY RON GREY, Ph.D.
Senior Vice President,
Great Place to Work

Organizations that foster inclusive cultures tend to be more innovative and outperform their competition by exceeding revenue growth targets, enhancing customer service, retaining more talent and much more. We call this winning formula Innovation by All. Increasingly, we see gender equality and women's empowerment as vital ingredients to inclusive innovation.

Recent research by Great Place to Work in support of the WE EMPOWER programme of UN Women, European Union and the International Labour Organization has identified significant empirical links between inclusive cultures, women's empowerment, innovation and business success. Based on 63,000 employee responses to GPTW's Trust Index survey at over 300 organizations in Canada, employers with the strongest cultures for Innovation by All experienced by women achieve:

- 4x faster year-over-year revenue growth
- 3.8x less voluntary staff turnover
- 1.3x greater perceived customer service
- 2x more meaningful opportunities for women to innovate at work

IMPLEMENTING WOMEN'S EMPOWERMENT PRINCIPLES

GPTW's research highlights key impacts of implementing the Women's Empowerment Principles developed by UN Women and UN Global Compact for advancing women's empowerment in the workplace, marketplace and community.

Principle 1: Establish high-level corporate leadership for gender equality
Senior level corporate leadership is instrumental to creating inclusive cultures for Innovation by All. Senior leadership sets and reinforces the tone for empowering and engaging women in innovation and leveraging their contributions to business success and meeting key stakeholders' expectations.

- Women who feel their leaders fully embody their organizations' best characteristics are 16x more likely to see a strong culture for Innovation by All.
- Innovation by All is experienced by an even greater multiple of 41x by women who see their leaders as being highly competent in running the business.
- Women who perceive clear and direct communication from management are over 10x more likely to experience a strong culture for Innovation by All.

- Upward communication is particularly key to promoting a strong culture of Innovation by All. Women who feel their leaders are approachable and easy to talk with are 16x more likely to experience a strong culture for Innovation by All.

Principle 2: Treat all women and men fairly at work – Respect and support human rights and non-discrimination
Women in organizational cultures who experience fair treatment, are respected as individuals and feel more supported in their work also feel more empowered, engaged and equipped to innovate and contribute to corporate success than their counterparts elsewhere.

- Women who feel all employees are treated fairly, regardless of their gender, are 20x more likely to see a strong culture for Innovation by All than those who perceive unfair treatment.
- In organizations that demonstrate genuine respect for employees as individuals and not just employees, women are 8.3x more likely to experience a strong culture for Innovation by All.

- Organizations that encourage strong work-life balance further promote cultures for innovation that are 9.5x greater than elsewhere.
- Women who feel well supported with the necessary resources and equipment are 13x more likely to experience a strong culture for Innovation by All.
- Women who perceive non-judgmental management styles are 16x more likely to innovate, while those who feel appreciated feel 11x more likely.

Principle 3: Ensure the health, safety and well-being of all female and male employees

Organizations where women experience psychologically, emotionally and physically safe workplaces are much more conducive to promoting inclusive and Innovative Workplaces by All.

- Women who experience psychologically and emotionally healthy workplaces are 11x more likely to see a strong culture for Innovation by All than those who don't.
- Even more significantly, women who experience a physically safe workplace are 83x more likely to see a strong innovation culture.

Principle 4: Promote education, training and professional development for women

Providing women with enriched opportunities for education, training and professional development is instrumental to promoting inclusive cultures for Innovation by All. Both formal and informal opportunities and on-the-job experience are important.

- Women who perceive strong training and development opportunities to advance themselves are 11x more likely to see a strong culture for Innovation by All.
- Further contributing to women's motivation to innovate are strong delegation and assuring promotions go to those most deserving.

Principle 5: Promote equality through community initiatives and advocacy

Showcasing strong organizational commitment to gender equality, inclusiveness and women's empowerment in the community and with key stakeholders fosters outstanding employee engagement and cultures of Innovation by All.

- Women who are strong advocates or ambassadors for their organizations are 16x more likely to be highly engaged in corporate innovation.
- Women who feel good about how their employers contribute to the community are 20x more engaged!

THE BUSINESS CASE FOR GIVING BACK

BY ALISON GRENIER, Head of Culture and Research, Great Place to Work

In partnership with Volunteer Canada and the Corporate Council on Volunteering, Great Place to Work recently released groundbreaking research on the business case for building strong community investment programs. Based on 66,000 Trust Index survey responses from 300 organizations, this research highlights the connection between corporate commitments to community and key business metrics including long-term career commitment, positive brand promotion, discretionary effort and employee impact. As reflected in the chart at right, the findings provide proof of increased benefits to business and tangible ways to create a corporate community investment program that improves employee engagement.

BETTER FOR BUSINESS. BETTER FOR PEOPLE. BETTER FOR THE WORLD. When employees are given the opportunity to engage in social and environmental impact programs as part of their work life, they are exposed to new perspectives and determinants affecting the world around them. This provides employees with opportunities to increase their empathy, skills and their ability to be changemakers through their work and other personal actions. All of this adds up to an enormous opportunity for employers to change the world, with the help of their employees, all while creating business value through improved employee engagement in their workplaces.

START THE CONVERSATION For managers considering ways to improve their organization's community commitments and programs, a wise next step is to encourage activities that will foster employee engagement. The most productive conversations on this topic come from cross-departmental discussions, including participation by HR, CSR, communications, senior leadership and other external stakeholders. Consider the following questions to get a community investment conversation started in your organization:

- What do we consider success for our community investment program?
- What would employees consider success?
- How do employees want to be involved?
- What indicators will tell us that programs are resonating with employees?
- What is our program missing?
- What outcomes would justify increased budget for this?
- How can we demonstrate to employees that we value the time they take away from work to support the community?

Like most people, most organizations recognize they have a responsibility to give back to the communities in which they operate, and have built this into their business plan. But it's not just what you do, it's how you do it. The Best Workplaces for Giving Back findings illustrate how your organization can live out your community commitment in unique and creative ways that engage employees and improve business results at the same time.

THE GREAT PLACE TO WORK TRUST MODEL

A timeless prescription for accelerating and sustaining engagement and business success

BY RON GREY, Ph.D.
Senior Vice President,
Great Place to Work

The development of our core conceptual framework for assessing and transforming organizations into high-trust, high-performance workplaces FOR ALL is rooted in the seminal work of Myron Moskowitz and Robert Levering in 1984. Their best-selling book triggered the Best Workplaces lists now published in over 60 countries and, accidentally, created a business called Great Place to Work.

The basic underlying principles and philosophies are simple, timeless and intuitive while backed and validated by extensive empirical research and business experience drawing on data representing over 100 million employees' workplace experiences worldwide.

WORKPLACE TRUST: THE FOUNDATION

Workplace trust revolves around a set of critical relationships – between management and employees, employees and their colleagues, and employees and their work. To build and sustain a great place to work, all three sets of relationships must not only be strong on their own but aligned with each other and the strategic vision and values of the enterprise.

Our empirical research spanning a broad cross section of industries, geographies, organizational and work force demographics are convincing in linking high-trust cultures to superior employee engagement and business success as measured by numerous Key Performance Indicators. These KPIs include financial metrics like revenue growth, profits, stock market returns; customer metrics like service excellence, loyalty, repeat business; employee and operational metrics like talent retention, productivity, absenteeism, engagement; and many others.

Workplace trust revolves around a set of critical relationships – between management and employees, employees and their colleagues, and employees and their work. Key management levers used to foster trust involve nine practice areas illustrated above.

To create and sustain a high-performance, great place to work, leaders must build trust by demonstrating credibility, respect and fairness ... and continuously encourage pride and camaraderie.

The overriding messages are clear: To create and sustain a high-performance, great place to work, leaders must build trust by demonstrating credibility, respect and fairness ... and continuously encourage pride and camaraderie.

LEVERS FOR ACTION AND POSITIVE CHANGE

Evolving from a good to a great to a best workplace is an ongoing journey marked by numerous hurdles and key milestones unique to each organization. We partner with clients to accelerate and sustain their journeys, navigating pitfalls, leveraging insights and applying practical management tools.

Key to this journey toward a Great Place to Work is maximizing the key levers for trust – nine practice areas or management “levers” in three major groupings covering:

1. inspiring leadership, upward and downward communication;
2. caring, developing and thanking employees; and
3. hiring the right talent, celebrating and sharing in the rewards of success.

By examining an organization’s underlying people management, policies, programs and practices within the context of these nine levers, Great Place to Work’s Trust Model helps organizations understand their culture and identify areas of opportunity to improve the employee experience.

Among the Trust Model’s unique features is an ability to integrate employee perception data with data on actual underlying management practices to identify areas of alignment and misalignment. In addition to identifying priority strengths and opportunities, this model also highlights potential “disconnects” where well-designed and intended programs are missing the mark with employees due to weak communication and/or execution.

LEVEL-UP YOUR LEADERSHIP

Excerpted from A Great Place to Work For All BY MICHAEL C. BUSH, CEO, and the Great Place to Work Research Team

Our mission at Great Place to Work is to build a better world by helping organizations become Great Places to Work FOR ALL. To do so, we need leaders to join us – leaders willing and able to create a great experience for everyone, no matter who they are or what they do for the company. We call this kind of a leader a For All Leader, and our new research lays out how to become one.

WHO IS THE FOR ALL LEADER?
 Day to day, a For All Leader is someone who looks to the employees across the company for the next great idea; who leads with values first, especially in the face of adversity. One who builds connectivity within and across teams; who can help inspire a sense of purpose and pride in employees; who elevates employees to achieve all they ever thought they were capable of, and then some.
 We admit, it's a tall order. The good news is, everyone can play

Leaders who level up get results

Source: Great Place to Work analysis

When leaders are more inclusive, more inspiring, and more caring, they win on outcomes like talent retention, innovation, and revenue growth.

regardless of their company's size or industry. Being a leader of a great workplace is not a function of your company's size or resources. It's a function of how you treat the people working there. When leaders are more inclusive, more inspiring, and more caring, they win on outcomes like talent retention, innovation, and revenue growth.

THE FOR ALL LEADERSHIP MODEL
 To understand how managers are leading their teams to a Great Place to Work FOR ALL, we dug into our data from hundreds of companies over many years. Our analysis covered a robust sample of 75,000 employees and more than 10,000 managers, and we identified five distinct leadership levels, which we've characterized into personas based on prominent themes.

- Level 1: The Unintentional Leader
Unaware of impact on others
- Level 2: The Hit-or-Miss Leader
Connects with some but not all staff
- Level 3: The Transactional Leader
Values outcomes over people
- Level 4: The Good Leader
Inclusive and sincere, but holds back
- Level 5: The For All Leader
Values individuals and fosters a team mindset

Together, these personas represent the For All Leadership Model. With each leadership level, a higher percentage of employees report they consistently experience a better workplace. Level to level, we also found a corresponding improvement in the areas of innovation, productivity, employee retention, and organizational agility. The chart above shows the incremental improvements across all five levels and, when comparing Level 1 to Level 5, employees with a For All Leader demonstrated:

- 353% higher productivity
- 300% greater agility
- 325% greater readiness to innovate
- 128% greater desire to stay

THE LEADERSHIP JOURNEY
 While not all leaders are necessarily able to evolve from Unintentional to For All, a jump from one level to the next is worth the effort. Even incremental improvements have a broad positive impact on the company and the people who work there.
 Being a For All Leader isn't easy. The For All Leader mindset means constantly re-evaluating what needs to be done, on the part of the leader, to help the team accomplish their goals. And regardless of where leaders fall on the spectrum, it's critical to have an accurate understanding of how their teams perceive them. If companies are committed to building Great Places to Work FOR ALL, all leaders must be guided by accurate data and analytics that give them this understanding. Informed by data, leaders can take targeted action toward continuous improvement.
 The fact is, being a great leader in the ways we've described is better for business, better for people, and better for the world. You'd be hard-pressed to find a leader who wouldn't want to be named as having the For All Leadership traits. So you may be asking yourself, why aren't more people For All Leaders?
 This is the question we have been asking as well.

WORLD'S BEST WORKPLACES

Great Place to Work conducts one of the largest employee surveys in the world, and employees everywhere report the same qualities make up a great workplace – trust, pride and camaraderie. Universally, a Great Place to Work is one where employees trust the people they work for, have pride in what they do and enjoy the people they work with.

Published October 15, 2018, The World's Best Workplaces list represents some of the largest global companies that have focused on culture as a business advantage by putting employees first. They stay ahead of the curve by continually innovating their culture to meet the constantly changing demands of work, technology and the marketplace.

This year, 57 multinational organizations qualified for consideration. Great Place to Work evaluated anonymously submitted statements from 2.7 million employees in 51 countries or regions. Company culture performance was then scored based on respect, fairness, pride, camaraderie and trust. Multinational companies that have appeared on Best Workplaces lists in multiple countries received the deepest scrutiny.

From the millions of employee comments collected, some of the most popular statements among the top 25 companies included "People care about each other here" and "People are willing to give extra to get the job done."

But most surprisingly, the highest scoring statements from employees at our winning companies all relate to diversity and inclusion. More than 92 per cent of respondents at the top 25 companies say they feel they are treated fairly, regardless of their sexual orientation, race and sex. That's surely great news, but it only reflects the sentiments at the world's best employers. There's still a lot of work to be done for the rest of the world's workforce.

Great Place to Work's mission is to help all companies reduce the gender gap by 2020, and to help them create an inclusive great workplace experience for every employee by 2030, regardless of their age, position or gender.
